Spent by Those Who Attended Re-Elected by Branch 2 of the Hibernian Social Session.

Entertainment in Honor of the Ladies' Auxiliary Was a Success.

A Scholarly Address Delivered by Attorney Newton G. Rogers.

INSTRUMENTAL AND YOCAL MUSIC

Rarely has such a grand gathering of Irishmen and women assembled together in Louisville as that which graced Hibernian Hall on Tuesday night, when Division I, A. O. H., held a aocial session in honor of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Young and old were there to listen to music of Ireland, to hear addresses on Irish and Catholic topics and to encourage the membera of a great and noble acciety, the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The large audience was welcomed by President Mike Tynan, who introduced David O'Connell, Chairman of the Literary Committee, in whose charge the Will Represent the Largest Branch in exercises of the evening were conducted. Chairman O'Connell made a graceful little address and in turn introduced Newton G. Rogers, the well known attorney, who spoke at length on the "French Laws of Religious Associations."

the relations that had existed between France and the Holy See for fourteen centuries, how that country had been favored with the title, "Daughter of the Church." Then he told the story of France's downfall from grace, how the politicians had brought disaster upon the country by trying to abolish religion within the coufines of the country. "No nation can be progressive without morals," said Mr. Rogers, "and there can be no morals without religion." The speaker devoted some time to the career of M. Combes, the French Premier, who is mainly responsible for the iniquitous law Charles A. Edelen was chosen as alterwhich has driven priests and nuns from nate. Mr. Sullivan has long been promthe fair land of France and made it almost a religious and educational desert. Hibernian County President. Comhes was born and reared a Catholic and studied for the priesthood, even taking minor ecclesiastical orders. Suddenly he broke away from the church aud her teachings. Where he had once been son aud student he became an implacable foe. In this respect Combes was like many other foes of the church, a renegade Catholic, and the worst foes the church has ever had to contend with

G. Murphy, the vice-rector; Monsignor Farrelly, the the first student of the college, which he entered in 1858. Mousignor Kennedy in presenting the young men said:

"Holy Father, here are ninety-six students of the American College who have come to present their homsge and to give evidence of their faith and their loyslty toward your holiness and the Holy See. They have come a long distance, from their nstive country to this holy city, to drink in learning sad piety under the shadow of the Holy See."

Pope Pius wslked about the loggis mong the students and greeted them most sffectionately. He sald they were a magnificent body of young men, and that he was delighted to see so many students from the United States. His Holiness theu preached a little sermon on the great advantage they had in hecoming learned priests, laying special emphasis on the cultivation of the priestly virtues, adding that a holy priest even without saying a word preaches hy example and concilistes those who are not of their faith. After thanking the students for their visit he blessed all the religions articles they carried.

The students in the American College at Rome are in a particular manner placed under the patronage of Our Lady of the Immsculste Conception. Hence they were especially gratified to he presented to the Pope on the eve of this great feast. On Tuesday, the fesst of the Immsculate Conceptiou, great crowds thronged St. Peter's. Pope Pius X. celebrated his mass in one of the numerous chapels. In Louisville the feast was more generally observed than usual, crowds filling the various churches at all of the masses and agsin at vespers in the evenlug.

John. J. O'Snillvan, Who Departed This Life December 7, 1902. A year has passed since our dear boy rielded his pure soul into the arms of his Msker. How we loved him! The gsp-God take him?" we valuly ask. "Surely this way-worn world has need of strong, Tea, Coffee, Pure Spices coursgeous hearts such as his," But trnly ''God's ways are not our ways.' Pond Lily and Home Did He call our heloved one to Himselt lest the future, close-veiled from our mortal gaze, should rob him of those manly gifts we prized so much? If so, twere hetter far that that noble heart he stilled in death. How could we bear to see the mark of sin upon that brow, those clesr eyes cloud with the darkening ray of evil? But still we can not feel that fate would deal so hardily with him, a tender son, a loving brother. No, no, Msry, queen of hesven, it was who heck-oned her faithful servant home. "Let us all go home," said he. The tender tles with which love bound him to us made him long to have us share the joy which heaven's opening portsls showed to his hrillant vision. God's will he done. Though the dark grave holds his mortal frame, his soul has resched that haven of rest where, in God's own time, we shall meet to part no more. shall meet to part no more.

NOW BISHOP HARTLEY.

A cahlegram from Rome ou Thursday announced that at the meeting of the They Are The Best Brands Made. Propaganda heid on that day the Rev. Father James J. Hartiey, of Steubenville, O., had heen reecommended to the Pope for appointment as Bishop of Columbus. After the Cardinals discussed at length the claims of the various candidates for Bishop of Columbus, Cardinal Gotti summed up the situation, and the congregation decided to submit Father Hartley's name to the Pope. The Bishop-elect is a name to the Pope. The Bishop-elect is a native of Ohio and during the past twenty years has been pastor of Holy Name church at Stuebenville. He is popular with clergy and people.

The devotion known as Forty Hours' prayer will begin at St. John's church at will close Tuesday morning. An excellent musical programme has been arranged for the opening services. The Very Rev. Father Bax will preach the sermon.

While Ireland is known as the Isle of Saints it may not be generally known order at Deamathalba. that Uister, the "Black North," has given many precious and hright ornaments to the church. It was in Ulster that St. Patrick established the first Archdiocese, the See of Armagh, in the year 445 A. D., or thirteen years after his coming to Ireland as an apostle. Donegal was the hirth place of St. Columbkille, the Dove of the church. In the year A. D. 885 Maelhrigid Mac-Dornan, Ahhot of Derry and Bishop of Rsphoe, of regal lineage, heing the thirteenth in descent from Nial the Great, was translated from Raphoe to the See of Armagh. This Bishop, we are told, was a man of uncommon erudition" and was styled he "ornameut of Europe" and also a man of luffexible justice. He was invariably chosen by the princes and chiefs of his country as their common umpire iu every private and political contest. Au instance of the benevolence of this excellent man is recorded by the annalists, as we are told in the year 908 he traveled to a remote part of Ulster to liberate a captive Britain from slavery. On the Feast of Pentecost in the year 889 a tumult was caused in Armagh hy Addid MacLaigne, King of Ulidia (Down), and Tiathbert MacMurchara, Prince of Oileach, of the family of the O'Nials. The former at the head of the Ulidians, the latter at the head of those Cinel Eoghaiu (Tyrone), disturbing the public tranquility. At all events the contest was quelled and peace restored hy he interposition of the Primate Maelrigia, who deemed it necessary to punsh the disputants by mulcting the offendng Uiidians in a fine of two hundred exen and caused six of the most active ringleaders to be executed on the gallows. the opposing faction, the clan Cinel

The city of Armagh was four times olundered during MacDornan's primacy -first by the Normans of Dublin, 890, under their chief Gluniarm, who demolished the city, razed several holy edifices and then withdrew, taking with them 710 captives. Again, in the year 893, the city was stormed and rohbed by the Normans of Lough Foyle, who again hostilely revisited it in the year 898 and pillaged the city. The Normans again, under the chieftaincy of Godfrid O'Himhair, sacked the city, though not the Cathedral, in the Cormack MacCuillenan hequeathed to the Ahbey of Armagh twenty-four ounces of gold and twenty-four ounces of silver, a very considerable sum, when we take this life on February 22, 927, after presiding over the See for a perid of forty-O'Scanlain repaired and greatly heautified the cathedral at Armagh, and founded a house of Franciscan Minorities in that city. He is styled "in Octavian's Registry" as the sixty-eighth archhlshop after St. Patrick who had presided over the see. He died on the 16th of March, 1270, after ruling the see for a period of nine years, at St. Leonard'a Abbey, near Dundalk, and was interred in the convent of his

GOING HOME.

What time, my day-long labor done, I drop my weary pen, And following the setting sun Am come back home again. I know no pleasure more complete,

No melody more glad, Than that of one loved voice so sweet; "O! boys, here comes your dad!"

She's always there, in rain or shine,

As constant as can be, With her wee boys, her hoys and mine, Who wait and watch for me. And how they shout and hail me in,

Those boys, and then she'll add Her happy voice above the din: "Now, boys, don't worry dad."

As if they could! God hless the boys! I'd rather have them bring The roof down with their joyous noise Than hear a Patti sing. And there she sits as proud as I,

And every whit as glad, Though every now and then she'll cry: "Now, boys, don't worry dad." If it should he the fates' decree,

And God forbid it may, That all these hearts should pass from Ere I have passed away,

God grant that when I come to die I be not deemed so bad, But I may hear a loved voice cry: -"O, boys, here comes your dad-" said to have been the subject of a debate some time ago in one of our prominent Exactly ln a similar manner he punished clubs. Only men, of course, were present and it is gratifying to find out that of the sixty that voted only nine said "yes." You will wonder how they defended their opinions. Well, these were their reasons for saying that a man should marry for money: First of all, as a husband has all the worry of the husiness which is to provide comforts for the wife, he is justified in expecting his life partner to contribute capital stock to work the business; and, secondly, that his wife's possession of money is a man'a only safe guarantee that she is msrrying him for love. The other side of the question plainly showed that in the eyes of most men the glrl year 919. During Maelhrigia's primacy from a marrying point of view—that is, with money is positively at a disadvantage If she wishes to marry. It was argued that the hard working, unselfish man who makes the best hushand is the one into account the value of money at that his wife is relying trustfully on him for who takes most pleasure in the fact that the provision of the necessaries of llfe, and who dreads having it said of him that "he married for money." STORE GIRLS.

Made Very Gratifying Records.

Many of Them Are the Sole Support of Their Families.

Those Attentive to Religious Duties Are the Most Deslrable.

The Catholic young woman in the department store is numerically strong, declares a recent department store manager in an article written for the New Carmelite Review, and he adds: "But greater than the strength of numbers is the strength of character with which she is fortified. She may in some cases he ill adapted to the requirements of the modern store, but the lustances in which honesty is brought into question are so rare as to be remarkable. There is as much difference hetween stores as there is hetween homes. The individuals who make up the organization of a store leave as much of an impression on the visitor as do the members of a family in the home. Some stores seem to have an entirely different atmosphere from others. One will have a husinesslike, accommodating air and employes with happy, contented faces; another will seem to be permeated with a spirit of discontent, discernible in the looks and actious of its employes. Here will be found something wanting in the management, perhaps rules too rigidly enforced or service indicating compulsory compliance instead of voluntary co-operation. A shopping tour through the large store districts will soon reveal these and other store characteristics to the observant young woman and when she seeks a positiou she wil often, with good judgment, accept a small salary in the hetter store and soon demonstrate her ability, if she he possessed of it, to hold a more remunerative position. The home life of the Catholic young woman is generally reflected in her conduct in the store and the reflection is usually creditable."

Now every word of this is as true of the Catholic girls in Louisville department atores as in similar stores in other and larger cities. We might add that a Catholic. It is a well known fact that the great majority of our shop girls are heautiful, beautiful not in a self-conscious manner and the purity of their characters as reflected in their countenances. These young women do not feel that it is a disgrace to have to work in a store. Instead they consider it a privilege and an honor to do something to aid the world's progress. Many of these Catholic girls have not only to clothe and feed themselves, hut also have to contribute to the support of a widowed mother and orphan brothers and sisters. Often, yes, too ofter, these girls are the only support of the family. And yet they bear their hurdens cheerfully and heartily enter into the spirit of doing good, of living for the sake of others. Their store lives make them no stranger to domestic or social requirements. Many of them are gifted with high intellectual attainments, accomplished musicians, experts with the needie and good housekeepers. This same writer tells us, and his experience is the same as that of managers of Louisville stores, that these Catholic girls to be useful most not be Catholics in name only. The Catholic young woman who is most exact in the observ ance of her religious duties is a more faithful and conscientious worker than the one who fails to practice the religion she professes to believe.
